BRUSSELS — Greece has withdrawn its threat to veto the entry of Spain and Portugal into the European Community after EC leaders approved an aid program for Greece and other Mediterranean nations of the community.

The Greek decision Saturday re-

Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou of Greece had threatened to block the entry of Spain and Portngal if his country did not receive sufficient aid from the special fund, known as the Integrated Mediter-ranean Programs. Greek officials had said they wanted 2.5 billion

Following the conclusion of the summit meeting, Theodoros Pan-galos, the Greek secretary of state for EC affairs, said that the amount of aid approved for Greece was "not the agreement we hoped for, but it is a successful solution." EC officials said that Greece had

PARIS — The French government is considering selling its holdings in industrial companies it nationalized in 1982, according to Edith Cresson, the minister of in-dustry, and senior executives of several state-owned companies.

Even a partial denationalization would represent a major political reversal for the Socialist government, which came to power in May 1981 proclaiming that nationaliza-tion was the means to stimulating economic growth and investments. The executives, who spoke on the

Mrs. Cresson, noting the reductions of state holdings in companies currently under way in West Germany and Britain, told the newspaper that she considered it "absurd" to approach the issue in a "systematic, ideological" manner, and that if the government decides to reduce its holdings, on a case by case basis, "why not?" She said that in selected cases, and with a view to generating funds for future investment, she would not oppose reducing the government's shareholding in industrial companies.

Emerging from the meeting with Gaston J. Sigur, a National Securi-ty Council staff member, Mr. Na-kasone said that they discussed the full range of trade issues.

"We talked a lot about how collaborate," he said. Mr. Sigur declined comment after the unusual Sunday meeting at

Mr. Nakasone's office. [A Japanese Foreign Ministry spokesman said that Mr. Sigur de-livered a personal letter from President Ronald Reagan urging that a high-level decision be made to resolve trade friction, The Associated Press reported.] The United States hopes to reduce its trade deficit with Japan.

The deficit last year was $36.8 billion, up from $21.7 billion in 1983. Mr. Sigur arrived Saturday in Tokyo with Lionel H. Oimer, undersecretary of commerce for international trade, in what appeared to be an 11th-hour campaign to wrest concessions from Japan before new telecommunications regulations go into effect Monday.

Mr. Reagan sent the envoys after being told that Japanese negotiators had not kept a commitment made by Mr. Nakasone in January that Japan's newly denationalized telecommunications market would be opened to U.S. products.

The new Japanese regulations can either assure U.S. companies of equal access or keep the door shut against them. Mr. Reagan has formed a close personal relationship with Mr. Na-kasone in a series of meetings during the past two years and is generally more sympathetic than Congress to Mr. Nakasone's claims that he is pushing as hard as he can. Mr. Nakasone said Saturday that Japanese industry could not

The U.S. Senate, reacting Thursday to news that Japan planned to increase auto exports to the United States by 450,000 vehicles a year, voted, 92-0, in favor of a nonbinding resolution calling on Mr. Rea-gan to retaliate with tariffs or quotas against Japan unless it took steps to open its markets.

Such pressure from Washington has created resentment among Japanese officials; they contend that their country is being made a scapegoat for a trade imbalance that is primarily the fault of the United States. Threats of retaliation in the U.S.

Senate resolution have particularly angered some members of the governing Liberal Democratic Party. They are said to be talking of ways that Japan might retaliate.

Panel Secretly Approves U.S. Military Payroll Cut

By George C. Wilson
Washington Past Service
WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled Senate Armed Services subcommittee on manpower has voted in a secret session to cut the Pentagon payroll by 175,000 people over the next two years to help hold down military spending. The cut, if enacted, would require a reduction in the active duty force of the the army, navy, air force and marine corps by 75,000 uniformed personnel and the De-fense Department's civilian work force by 100,000 employees over fiscal 1986 and 1987.

At the same session, the subcommittee voted to delay President Ronald Reagan's recommended 3percent pay increase for the mili-tary to January from July, when it would be raised to 4 percent. The manpower subcommittee's arc of racial unrest. The minister in charge of black affairs, Gerrit N. Viljoen, said recently in an American television broadcast from South Africa that the township, called Ekangaia, was a shining example of the government's new policy of "orderly urbanization" for Afri-

EKANGALA, South Africa — Julius Ma-

But the next day police dispersed a protest meeting in Ekangala with tear gas, rubber bullets and shotguns. A youth was killed, another was wounded.

Mr. Masopha, who organized the protest meeting, has since spent each night at a different place in the black townships of the Witwatersrand region. His wife, Helen, said the police have called several times to arrest him. Other members of his six-man committee are also in hiding.

getting worse. Ekangala is, in fact, the centerpiece of a major exercise in social engineering.

Having acknowledged the impossibility of a key feature of the apartheid ideology, which was to keep blacks out of the cities, the Botha government now accepts their permanence but its planning suggests that it wants to cushion the effect of this decision by holding as many as possible at a maximum commuting distance

The growth of black townships such as Soweto, which are close to the big cities, is being restricted. Outer industrial belts are being created, up to 100 miles (160 kilometers) away. Economic incentives are used to encourage industries to set up there, and the provision of housing is manipulated to compel black workers to live in townships in these new "growth points." High-speed trains are planned to carry long-distance commuters to jobs in the cities.

Where possible, the new commuter townships are incorporated in tribal "homelands" scheduled for nominal independence so that politically, as well, they do not impinge upon what is regarded as "white" South Africa. Ekangala, 75 miles northeast of Johannes-burg, is the nucleus of the outer belt being established for the Witwatersrand region, named for a 60-mile-long ridge with Johannesburg at the center. Ekangala is planned to have a population of 300,000 in 15 years. ists to move now to areas where land is not so expensive and labor is cheaper." The provision of housing in existing black townships along the eastern Witwatersrand is being slowed. Thousands of dwellings determined to be illegal are being demolished. People desperate for houses are told they must go to Ekangala. Julius Masopha, 27, was one of those who was forced to make this choice, even though he works in the western Witwatersrand, which means he spends six hours commuting by bus every day.

He was not unhappy about it. Physical conditions in Ekangala are better than in other black townships along the Witwatersrand. The houses have electricity and running that leaked from the Union Carbide pesticide factory here in December are suffering from incur-able problems with breathing, sleeping, digesting food and per-forming even light physical labor, doctors say.

Government health officials say that 5,000 to 10,000 people will probably never be able to make a living because of their injuries. But problems in counting the injured and keeping treatment records on them have led to angry assertions by independent health groups that there could actually be as many as 50,000 people who were seriously injured.

Moreover, confusion, inefficiency and haphazard record-keeping are plaguing the medical relief sys-tem created for the victims, health experts said in interviews.

The experts said there was random or casual prescribing of pain-killers, sedatives, antacid tablets and many other drugs, some of which were potentially harmful.

In addition, health experts and some local and national government officials said there would probably never be a precise figure of how many people died from the leak of methyl isocyanate at the Union Carbide factory on Dec. 3. It was the worst industrial accident in history.

The state government of Madhya Pradesh, which has overseen the relief and counting efforts, reported last week that it had count-ed 1,431 deaths and that about 1,150 of the dead had been identi-

After the accident, Indian journalists in Bhopal made surveys of burial grounds, cremation areas and hospitals, and from that estimated that 2,000 to 2,500 people

The Indian government is sticking to its official toll of 1,400. Government officials say that regardless of how many actually died in the accident, it appears unlikely that the official count will rise much beyond 1,700 or 1,800 because of the difficulty of tracking down and identifying all who died.

Some private groups have asserted that the number of deaths is from 3,000 to 15,000. The state government is the only group that has conducted anything purporting to be a comprehensive survey of the victims. Its figure of 1,431 deaths is based on a survey of cemeteries, crematoriums and hospitals, as well as public appeals and door-to-door attempts to get people to come forward with names of who died.

Those involved in the counting said their efforts were hampered by the difficulties in surveying a population of beggars, transient workers and other impoverished people who sleep in the ramshackle shan- say there is no cure. tytowns that surround the huge Union Carbide factory in the old section of this city.

Group Says It Killed Basque Publisher

VITORIA, Spain (AFP) - The Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group, or GAL, which opposes Basque autonomy, claimed responsibility Sunday for three recent attacks in France, including the killing Saturday of a Basque nationalist publisher.

He also said GAL was responsible for an attack Friday on a bar in Bayonne that killed one person and wounded three, and an attack Tuesday in Ciboure, near Bayonne, in which two persons were injured.

Notes About People

Howard H. Baker Jr., a Tennessee Republican and former Senate majority leader who is considering running for presient in 1988, says presidential election campaigns are too long and expensive. He told the Commission on National Elec-tions, a bipartisan study panel, that contributions by political action committees and labor unions should be banned. He also said shorter campaigns would be encouraged if the led-eral government delayed granting of campaign funds until after Jan. 1 of an election year.

Arthur F. Burns, 80, who is returing as ambassador to West Germany this spring, says he is not leaving his post because he is tired of Bonn or because he feels burdened by his duties or his age, Mr. Burns, a longtime economic adviser to presidents, has told friends he wants to write two books on monetary policy and feels that now is the time to get started.

Does John A. Zaccaro rue the day his wife, Geraldine A. Fernaro, agreed to run for vice president, thus leading to court proceedings over his financial affairs? Not at all, says Ms. Ferraro, who recently told a National Women's Political Caucus meeting in Washington, "John and I have been talking about the campaign over the past couple of weeks. And John said to me, Yes, Gerry, it was worth it. And, yeah, if we had it to do over again, we would do it over again.

An agreement signed last week transfers 4,200 acres (1,700 hectares) and 500 buildings to Costa Rica for about $1,24 million. The pact was the result of talks that began in mid-1983 with the assistance of the U.S. Embassy.

United Brands, formerly United Fruit, is also turning over free a wharf and a railroad with eight locomotives and about 200 freight cars, and will sell its 3,000 employees their homesteads and pay them about $5 million in severance, ac-cording to George M. "It's a solution that is satisfactory for us and for them and especially for the landless workers, Ambassador Fernando Zumbado said. "Cacao will work out very well and permit even a little industrialization. The support of the U.S. government was a determin-

Also pleased, and relieved, was the State Department, which was caught during the talks between its traditional defense of U.S. corporations abroad and the Reagan administration's desire to bolster Central America's premier democracy.

"If United Brands is happy and Costa Rica signed it, we're happy, believe me," a State Department official said.

The pact takes United Brands out of the banana-growing business it started in Costa Rica at the turn of the century. Its banana and palm oil operations on Costa Rica's east coast will not be affected, but these now involve only buying and shipping fruit grown independently.

The west coast plantations inciuded schools, hospitals, stores and housing for 3,000 employees. About 47,000 other Costa Ricans earned a living directly or indirectly from them, according to Costa Rican estimates. The company also paid an estimated $40 million a year to the government in concessionary payments and taxes on exports and workers' incomes.

create the country's basic political machinery. A previous national vote in 1982 and a presidential election in 1984 led to the writing of a new constitution, the appointment of a supreme court, and the election of Mr. Duarte last June.

The proposal has been distributed to government agencies for their comments. Although the directive could be altered or even rescinded because of the comments, officials at the budget office said they expected it to take effect in the fall.

The administration has already reduced the amount of information available to the public by increasing the authority of government officials to classify information, cutting back on the collection of statistics and eliminating hundreds of government publications.

But the American Library Association considers the directive the most extreme step the administration has taken.

"It's a real trend of this adminis tration to limit public access to information," said Eileen D. Cooke, the associate executive di-rector and director of the association's Washington office. "The entire thrust is to reduce the accountability of government." Asked to comment on Miss Cooke's assertions, Edwin L. Dale Jr., spokesman for the budget office, said: "This is a proposal and we are now in a comment period. Comments will be taken into ac-

A White House Center of Influence Envoy Knows National Security Council Eclipses Cabinet

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - According to Jeane J. She was talking about the meetings of President Ronald Reagan's National Security Council. Mrs. Kirkpatrick regularly attic and heartfelt expression of political frustration and anger. Americans keep buying more and more Japanese goods. American producers, losing sales to the Japanese competitors, bitterly complain to their senators that they cannot sell with equal freedom in Japan. Retaliation is usually the first response that springs to mind. Is that what the United States, in its own interest, now ought to try?

It's Not Japan's Fault...

It is quite true that the Japanese do not run an open economy, at least not in the North American manner. Selling foreign goods in Japan is much more difficult than it should be. But the enormous widening of the United States's trade deficit is not Japan's fault.
Last year Americans spent $37 billion more on Japanese products than Japanese spent on American products. That was more than double the trade gap of two years earlier, in 1982. But Japan's trade policies are no worse than they were in 1982. If anything, they are a little better. Japan is not buying any less from the United States than it did two or three years ago; it is one of the few countries in the world that is buying somewhat more.

The real source of this tremendous trade deficit is to be found in the United States. America is on a binge of borrowing and spending — led, unfortunately, by President Rea-gan's budget. The continual borrowings by the U.S. Treasury push up interest rates, sucking in investment capital from all over the world. As that money is exchanged into dollars, it forces up the exchange rate.

As things stand, the dollar is overvalued by

The U.S. Senate's 92-0 vote last week for trade retaliation against Japan was an authenwere a 25-percent rebate on every Japanese product sold for dollars and a 25-percent tax on every American product sold for yen. Is it remarkable that Japanese sales to the United States are soaring? The surprise is that U.S. sales to Japan have not fallen.

Every senator understands that the trade deficit is being steadily widened by the presi-dent's budget, now about $220 billion a year in the red. Some of those senators have been working hard for the past three months to try to push it toward the point of balance. They have not made much progress. No wonder there is a lot of frustration at the Capitol.

Japan deserves to be reproached for its resis-tance to foreign goods. At home, it has never fully accepted the same rules of open world trade of which, abroad, it is one of the world's greatest beneficiaries. But Japanese trading practices do not account for the dramatic and dangerous increases in the American trade deficit over the past two years.

It is entirely understandable that senators, constantly hearing people's grievances about foreign competition, would want to kick a foreign government. But that vote last week was merely a symbolic gesture.

The sure sign that the senators have begun to work seriously on a real remedy will come when they vote to cut government spending and to raise the level of taxation. That is what it is going to take to pull the United States's foreign trade back into balance, and to restore fair competition in prices.

- THE WASHINGTON POST.

... But Japan's Not Helping

At the least, the Japanese government miscalculated the message it seemed to deliver with its announcement on automobile exports to the United States. It was an uncharacteristically inept move. Over the coming year, Japan said, it will limit the number of cars shipped to the United States to 2.3 million — a larger quota, but still a quota. That decision arrived at a moment when the two governments were locked in negotiations over sales of U.S. telecommunications equipment to Japan.

When the Reagan administration dropped its insistence on import quotas for Japanese cars, it was inviting the Japanese companies to compete in the United States without further restraint. In return it wanted Japan to give U.S. companies equal access to their market, beginning in a visible and important field — telecommunications — in which the Americans are genuinely ahead of the competition.

The White House took the Japanese response last week to mean that Japan would rather stick with quotas on cars - and by implication, also to stick with the buy-Japanese rule that prevails in telecommunications. in an unusually sharp statement, the White House told the Japanese that it was no deal and that the United States would continue to insist on American manufacturers' rights to sell communications products in Japan free of the traditional discrimination.

Perhaps the White House is wrong and the explanation is simpler, that Japan only feared a great surge of Japanese cars into the United States, inviting a protectionist reaction in Congress. The quotas in effect for the past four years — legally imposed by Japan, in fact demanded by the United States — have heavily favored three of the Japanese automobile companies. There are five or six others that want larger shares of the market, and perhaps the Japanese government felt that it could not control the scramble without formal quotas.

But the quotas are a fundamentally bad idea. Over the past four years they have clearly pushed up the prices of both domestic and imported cars in the United States. Similarly, Japan would serve its people's interests by opening up its own markets. Rather than holding down the number of cars shipped to the United States, the Japanese would do better to sell as many as they can, while seeing to it that those sales are balanced by growing sales of U.S. goods to Japan. The place to begin would be, clearly, telecommunications.

Reagan: He Stands Fast, so Pragmatists Move N EW YORK — Ronald Reagan brings ideology to the pragmat-ic world of Washington. The politicians and much of the take into account his ideological By Saul Friedman This is the second of two articles.

press in the national capital tend to create presidents in the image of those they have been accustomed to seeing - men who move to the center upon entering the White House. Mr. Reagan has been the most important leader of the conservative movement since the defeat of Barry Goldwater in 1964. As Ronnie Dugger documents in his book "On Reagan," which covers Mr. Reagan's many radio speeches of the last two decades, his most basic beliefs have not changed in that period. Mr. Reagan's political popularity, White House polls have shown, has been traced to the consistency of his strong views. That consistency and the genuineness of his views have been underestimated by, and have stood out in contrast to, the traditionally more pragmatic and cynical views of establishment Washington. As the Urban Institute put it: "The Reagan administration, more than most others, has had a clear vision of what it was trying to accomplish."

Thus, while the president stands fast as a result of long-held beliefs on behalf of tax cuts or weapons systems, it is inevitable that the pragmatists whose views are, after all, movable, must move toward him. Mr. Reagan has many times in the past equated the evils of big govern-ment at home with loss of individualism and the threat to freedom from collectivism and communism abroad. Thus his determined support for his tax cut program was based not merely on the political popularity of cut-ting taxes, but also on his belief in the necessity of permanently curbing the size and role of government.

He has led a massive transfer of spending from domestic to military rograms because, as he has repeatedly said, he believes government should not impede the ability of its citizens to succeed on their own and that government's primary duty is to protect the national security.

Mr. Reagan's tactics — asking for and holding out for more than he was expected to get — have succeeded, said a senior staff member of a House committee, because he has had a simple, straightforward message which was clear and compelling that government was the problem rather than the problem-solver."

Mr. Reagan seems to be getting help this year from the pressure that has been created by the most spectacular failure of his administration, the unprecedented $200-billion deficit that could wreck Reaganism. In lieu of having a program, Democrats have been heavily critical of the Reagan deficits. But the deficits become another important tactic for

Mr. Reagan's continued success in freeze in domestic spending and othfurther diminishing the reach and role of government by obtaining new cuts in domestic programs.

The deficit has become an insurance policy against the Democratic opposition," said John Bickerman, research director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a nonpartisan Washington think tank of partisan washington timbs tank of moderate ideology. "As long as Reagan runs a big deficit," Mr. Bickerman said, "Democrats are under pressure to help him cut it. They can do so only two ways, by cutting the budget or raising taxes. And no one wants to be for tax increases."

Consequently, Democrats have joined Republicans on the Senate strength will be on the wane because Budget Committee in supporting a he is a lame duck. But that does not

WASHINGTON — Ronald Rea-W gan's mastery as a political leader was demonstrated again in the House vote for the MX missile. In four years as president, he has not lost in Congress on an issue that he called decisive. But even that record is not a sufficient measure of his talent for leadership.

When political scientists look back at the Reagan presidency, one quality will dazzle them more than any other. That is Mr. Reagan's ability to create his own realities. He asserts, as truth, visions that have nothing to do with the facts — and moves the whole framework of debate to his premises.

A longstanding example is his as-sertion, made in the 1980 campaign and repeated since, that in the years before he took office "America had unilaterally disarmed." If words mean anything, that statement is nonsense, in the 1970s the United States added 5,000 nuclear warheads to its strategic missiles, built the Tri-dent and Trident-2, and developed the cruise missile. Looking at the facts, no rational person could say America "unilaterally disarmed."

But Mr. Reagan is a man of convic-tions, not facts. And to a high degree, his convictions have become the premises of debate on military spending. With all the concern in Congress about the size of the defense budget, hardly anyone in the political mainstream challenges the proposition that America has to make up for years when it became "weak."

A dramatic example is the Strategic Defense Initiative. When Mr. Reagan produced the idea in a speech two years ago, it was labeled "star wars" and dismissed by experts as pie in the sky. They said the technology did not exist and could not imaginably produce even an imperfect defense against missiles for decades. The Russians would develop new weapons to clude such a system.

The objections to the Strategic Defense Initiative remain. Its most passionate advocates no longer even claim that it is likely to produce a perfect defense — and without that, the effect must be to stimulate an offensive arms race. But the president continues to speak of the concept in visionary terms, as an end to fear. And there is every indication that Congress is going to start down the SDI road, at a cost that will come to hundreds of billions of dollars.

The whole question of the budget is another example of Mr. Reagan's ability to impose his far-out reality on politics. He has run up the biggest deficits in American history more than the cumulative total from George Washington through Jimmy Carter. And everyone knows why: He sharply cut government revenue and raised expenditure.

Yet be continues to maintain that and will achieve it without holding back on military increases or raising taxes. As far as one can tell, the public believes that fantasy - or beleves in Mr. Reagan enough to turn away from the facts.

How does he do it? What is the secret of Mr. Reagan's power to im-pose his most fanciful visions on our perception of reality? Analysis will be exploring the mystery for years. but a few clues are evident now.

Trust is a key. Everyone trusts Mr. Reagan as a person. He is so obviously sincere. He believes all those things he says. There is none of the defensiveness in him of a Richard Nixon; he is confident and easy. He has proof that dreams can win over facts. because his own dreams come true.

America is a country of dreams, and Mr. Reagan's genius is to under-stand that. We would rather hear that we can strike it rich, bowever remote that prospect is for any individual, than be told that the government will help if we are poor. George McGovern found the limits of egalitarianism when he proposed taxing away inheritances over $500,000; even the poorest did not want to give up the dream of leaving riches to their children.

The only trouble is that dreams do not displace reality in the long run. Lower taxes and free enterprise will not run subway systems or support universities or in other ways sustain community life. The consequences of runaway deficits and a mounting arms race will fall on our children But such concerns have not produced an effective challenge to the most remarkable politician of our age.

next and paying the debts in between. True, even if Israel did agree to sit down with official representatives of the PLO, there would be no assurance that the outcome would be honored by all PLO factions or the rejectionist Arab states. is, however, certain that no other Palestinian snokesmen would be able to sign an accord if it was unacceptable to the PLO

Moreover, not being official representatives, such "acceptable" negotiators might well have to be more obdurate than the PLO itself. True, the PLO is Israel's mortal enemy. It is not prepared to accept the validity of the Zionist tenets that underpin Israel's existence. And it claims political and historical rights to areas from which Palestinians fled or were expelled in 1948.

The PLO's mainstream faction may in practice be prepared today to settle for less than was envisioned in the Palestinian Covenant. But there is no certainty that the organization's tactical retreat to more limited goals — it is now demanding a Palestinian state restricted to the areas occupied Israel in 1967 - will be accepted by all its factions or the rejectionist Arab states.

Indeed, the attainment of this more limited objective might well turn out to be a springboard for reviving the long-range irredentist goal of elimnating the state of Israel. Nor, finally, is it by any means clear that the PLO is prepared to abandon what it calls the 'armed struggle" - its strategy of indiscriminate terror against civilians.

But if Israel wants peace, it must make peace with its mortal enemies above all. To try to settle with proxy negotiators would be futile at best, and potentially dangerous. Israel must insist on speak-ing directly to those who can make peace.

How long must it take, how many more wars must be fought, how many lives must be wasted and how much treasure spent before we recognize that the PLO is the genuine representative of the Palestinian people and the key to any settlement of the Arab Israeli conflict?

French governments - of the right or left -have tried to protect French carmakers not only from Japanese, but also from European competition by all conceivable means.

The U.S. Defense Department is in crisis. Its tation by a sclerotic defense bureaucracy.

Many of the Pentagon's major contractors have recently been tainted by scandal. Its largest, General Dynamics, has seen the former manager of its Electric Boat division claiming to have inflated costs. National Semiconductor has pleaded guilty to violating federal rules on testing chips. Sperry has admitted falsifying bills for work on the MX. Now General Electric stands accused of filing false claims for work on the Minuteman warhead.

Crime aside, many contractors charge the tried to collect $25 million for legal expenses in fighting a rival. Rockwell billed for country market demand, but by highly detailed specifi-cations from military officials. They are the kept creatures of the Pentagon bureaucracy, only so faithless because so robbed of dignity.

The arrangement suits each side's private agenda. Pentagon officials gain the power to build empires and to gold-plate weapons at whim. The contractors rack up profits without the exertion of competition. The deal is cemented by revolving-door employment: In the three years ending in 1983, at least 1,900 highranking officers retired from the military and went to work for contractors. But consider the consequences. By destroying competition among contractors, the Pentagon loses every benefit of quality and cost that free markets bring. Equally serious is the stifling of innovation. The Pentagon's record for producing innovative weapons is dismai. Its best weapons, like the F-16 fighter or Side-the official procurement agencies.

The bedrock of the United States's military superiority over the Soviet Union ought to be its free economy and superior technology. In squelching both, the Pentagon forfeits its greatest advantages. Instead of being diverted by the minutiae of the military budget, Congress could double fighting power and halve procurement costs by going to the root of the Pentagon's disease.

Message From an Israeli: The PLO Can't Be Ignored By Meir Merhav

Officials in Beijing see little like-lihood that these obstacles will be press understanding for the U.S. nuclear buildup. They are, they say, TERUSALEM - There has long been a national consensus among Israelis that we will not talk to the Palestine Liberation Organization. In this, we are making a grave mistake, for detestable as the PLO may appear to us, it is the only plausible representative of the Palestinian people.

The proposals put forward by Yasser Arafat, King Hussein of Jordan and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt for talks with Israel about the future of the occupied territories have provoked a new chorus of refusal: Everyone who counts in Israeli politics has declared once again that we shall never, never talk to the PLO. So far, the Reagan administration - prodded, no doubt, by Jerusalem - has stood loyally by them. In fact, Israel undertook long ago, in the Camp David accords, to talk to the Palestinians about their future. That commitment remains binding on any government of Israel. The current government, a fragile coalition led by the Labor Party, is committed to a "Jordanian" solution to the Palestinian-Israeli conflict. It has therefore responded with lukewarm interest to Mr. Mubarak's suggestion for talks with a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation. But the crux of his initiative is not negotiations between Israel and the Jordanian king: It is to get Israelis talking to Palestinians. Mr. Mubarak knows well enough that there can be no solution to the Palestinian problem unless this happens. Yet most Israelis remain obdurate. Jerusalez will not sit down with representatives of the PLO. Nor will it accept anyone nominated by the PLO. At best, some moderate Israelis seem willing not to look too closely into the political biographies of Palestinians who may come to the table. To such Israelis, it would be acceptable if Palestinian negotiators sympathized with the PLO. They might voice its positions; they might even, on the quiet, really be PLO nominees — as long as they are not officially members of that organization. To qualify, they must also abjure terrorism and renounce most of the PLO's extreme demands including the Palestinian Covenant's call for the destruction of the state of Israel, the claims to Jerusalem and the demand that Palestinian refugoes be granted the right of return.

It would certainly be a good thing for Israel & such "moderate" Palestinians could be found - and bestowed with the power to make agree-ments that would be binding on their fellow Pai-estinians. That, however, is not now the case. Many Palestinians are no doubt ready to abjure terrorism and give up the armed struggle against Israel — if only for the practical reason that neither the Palestinians nor the rest of the Arab world has the power to vanquish Israel by force. Others may be willing to abandon the dream of returning to Jaffa, Haifa, Lod, Ramlah and the other towns and villages where they or their fore-bears were born. A few may even be willing to holding on to parts of the West Bank that it considers vital for its security.

But no Palestinians will waive the right to selfdetermination — the right to national sovereignty over however small a homeland of their own. And no Palestinian signature on any pact will be bind-ing unless it is seen as satisfying these aspirations. Why, then, do some Israelis seem interested in accept, with clenched teeth, Israel's insistence on sitting down with non-PLO Palestinians? Many have a cynical logic of their own, Israel would "negotiate" with Palestinians who represent no one but themselves; it might even reach a "settlement" with some carefully chosen "notables" only to have that settlement promptly rejected and its signatories branded as traitors, if not worse.

With this, Israel would have demonstrated that can be conciliatory - and at the same time would have ensured that nothing came of the talks. We would thus persuade ourselves and the rest of the world that there is "no one to talk to" among the Arabs about the territories.

What would be wrong with this? Why not highlight the impasse for all the world to see? Because, in the end, the Palestinian problem is also Israel's problem, and it is unacceptable to those of us who do not want Israel to become a binational state another Lebanon, in effect -- or to remain forever a walled-in fortress surviving from one war to the

We have issued a statement calling on other unions to unite and join our political strike to bring down the regime," said a your doctor who asked not to be named because of concerns for his safety.

General Nimeiri arrived Wednesday in Washington, just after the start of the riots. Although his visit is a private one for his annual medical tests, he will meet this week with President Ronald Reagan and other officials.

A major topic will be U.S. aid, including restoration of aid that the Reagan administration has frozen in an effort to bring about econom-

The riots were prompted by aus-terity measures that General Nimeiri has already taken, including removal of government subsidies on some essential commodities that caused steep price increases. Bread prices went up by 33 percent and gasoline prices by 50 percent.

Western diplomatic sources were skeptical that the doctors' strike alone would pose a serious threat to General Nimeiri. But a Western diplomat said the strike could become serious "if it were long-term and other unions joined it."

The government had no immediate comment on the strike.

Alien in Japan Chooses Jail to Fingerprinting

The Associated Press TOKYO - The first foreigner to challenge Japan's law requiring aliens to be fingerprinted has told a court that she would drop her legal battle and instead serve a five-day prison term on the charges.

Kathleen Morikawa, a U.S. citizen, was arrested in June for refusing to be fingerprinted three years ago under a law that requires all foreigners 16 or older to be fingerprinted if they stay in the country one year or longer. Since her arrest, 131 other foreigners have challenged the law. Among Japanese, only criminals are fingerprinted.

A lower court ruled that Mrs. Morikawa should be fined 10,000 yen ($40) or jailed for five days. Breaking the law carries a maximum one year in prison or a fine of up to 30,000

"It's not a matter that can be solved by paying 10,000 yen so I'd rather follow my conscience and pay it by serving five days in prison," Mrs. Morikawa said.

EUROBONDS

First-Quarter Volume Rose 55% to $32-Billion High

By CARL GEWIRTZ International Herald Tribune

ARIS - A record volume of $32 billion was raised in the Eurobond market during the first quarter, statistics supplied by Salemon Brothers show. That was a rise of 55 percent from the year-earlier pace. All the currency sectors except the pound sterling and the guilder shared in the expansion. Paper denominated in U.S. dollars rose 60 percent from a year earlier, to $24.5 billion. That was 76 percent of total volume, up from 74 percent a year earlier.

The Deutsche mark was a far distant second most popular currency, with $1.83 billion of the first-quarter total. This was a scant increase from last year, reducing the DM's market share to 5.6 percent Eurobond Yields For Week Ended March 27 U.S.S ig term, int'l Inst. ____

Calculated by the Lucamboon sues showed the greatest jump from a year earlier— up almost 1,100 percent because such issues were first allowed only late last year.

The Canadian dollar scored a 256-percent gain-with first-quarter volume at the equivalent of $1.11 billion, while the European Currency Unit, up 55 per-cent, inched out the pound as the third most popular Eurobond vehicle, with volume of $1.5 billion. The pound was in fourth place, with $1.25 billion worth of issues.

The total volume dwarfs the $8.4 billion that Orion Royal Bank estimates was available for reinvestment due to interest and principal repayments. This actually understates the situation because many issuers took advantage of market developments—especially in the floating-rate market, where borrowing costs were dramatically shaved—to prematurely redeem more expensive outstanding debt and replace it. (The volume of Eurodollar FRNs jumped 65 percent from the pace set in the first quarter of EVERTHELESS, the figures indicate a massive inflow of new money to the market. January was a record month, with $14.1-billion worth of new issues. This slowed to $8.7 billion in February and was only slightly better in March, at $9.1 billion. But the March figure was 36 percent greater than the

Whether this pace can be sustained is a question that troubles some bankers. They suspect that the move into Eurodollar bonds has been a shift to correct the underweighting of dollar holdings in international portfolios that developed during the long period of dollar weakness in the late 1970s and early 1980s. But that correction is over and, if anything bankers now think that portfolios are overweighted in dollar securities.

And, these bankers ask, even if the dollar remains strong and continues to be bolstered by substantially higher interest rates than are available on alternate currency investments, is it reasonable to expect accumulation of new holdings to continue at anywhere near the current pace?

Obviously, no one has the answer. But the market's performance last week gave no reason to believe that a saturation level was near. This is because that while the dollar dropped sharply, underwriters were able to sell $1.05 billion worth of floating-rate notes and $525 million of fixed-coupon straight debt.

There was particular interest in the Council of Europe's $50 million of eight-year floating-rate notes because this was the agency's first offering of dollar-denominated securities. National Westminster's $400 million of 15-year notes were also well

But the terms of the straight dollar debt showed that prices now have to be pitched high enough to compete with returns available in New York. Denmark, for example, which recently sold bonds here yielding 22 basis points over comparably dated U.S. Treasury paper, last week had to pay 74 basis points over the U.S. government to launch its $200 million of 10-year bonds bearing a coupon of 12 percent. (There are 100 basis points in 1

Likewise, General Foods — which earlier this year could have sold paper in the Eurobond market at below what the Treasury was paying — paid 21 basis points more. Its $75 million of five-year notes were offered at 99% bearing a coupon of 11% percent. Even so, placement was not easy and it ended the week trading at

Mazda Postpones U.S. Plant

> No Link Is Seen With Quotas

By James Risen

Los Angeles Times Service

DETROIT — Mazda Motor Corp. is indefinitely postpouring the construction of its first U.S. auto-assembly plant, outside Detroit, and might abandon the project altogether, Mazda officials said.

The Japanese concern said Fri-day it was delaying the April 24 groundbreaking ceremony at the Flat Rock, Michigan, site after the federal government's decision on Thursday not to issue a $20-million urban-development grant for the project. Mazda also said the $450-million project's fate has been threatened the inability of its Japanese building contractor to win concessions from the Detroit Building Trades Council, which represents the construction workers who will

U.S. government officials in Michigan said that they did not believe that Mazda was having second thoughts about the plant because the U.S. market would be more open to Japanese automakers starting Monday.

"We are trying to keep away from associating this with the Japa-nese decision to let more cars in," said Walt Sanders, an aide to Rep-resentative John D. Dingell, Demo-crat of Michigan, whose congres-sional district includes Flat Rock. 'Mazda hasn't said anything to us about withdrawing (their plans for the plant) on that basis."

"It has nothing to do with quo tas, and I'd be very surprised if the project doesn't go ahead eventual-ly," the mayor of Flat Rock, Ted

A Mazda spokesman, Ron Hartwig, said the federal subsidies "or their equivalent" are "critical" to the future of the plant. "Unless an acceptable agreement is reached with the Building Trades Council," he added, "the project can't go for-ward."

Mr. Hartwig added that Mazda executives would meet in Japan this week to decide the future of the Michigan project.
Mazda's decision came as Japan raised its U.S. auto-export quota by 24.3 percent for the year starting Monday. For the past four years, (Continued on Page 9, Col. 1)

Canada Moves to Spur Oil Output

Pact Reached To Ease Drillers Financial Burden

By Douglas Martin New York Times Service CALGARY, Alberta — An important agreement between Canada's federal government and the three oil-producing provinces has given new impetus to an emerging revival in oil ex-ploration and production.

The accord, reached last week, comes at a time when Canadian oil executives are spending again after several slow years, and indeed may well have been anticipated by these executives, who felt that the new government of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney would lessen the industry's financial burdens.

The reasons for the rebound, experts say, are better domestic and foreign markets for Canadi-an oil and gas, and more attrac-tive drilling prospects than those available in the United States.

The evidence of recovery in-cludes record drilling opera-tions; speculators lining up to buy land for exploration, and extensive capital-spending plans. And there is evidence on another level in Alberta: a booming limousine-rental business, busy luxury restaurants, and talk that another skyscraper or two will soon sprout from the prairie.

It all recalls the happy days of the late 1970s, when there seemed to be no top to the price

But in 1980, worldwide petroleum prices began their long slide. For the Canadian oil industry, that situation was made worse by new provincial royal-ties and taxes by the federal gov-ernment, instituted the next year, that were regarded by the industry as somewhere between unseemly and larcenous.

In last Tuesday's agreement the federal government and the country's three principal oil- and gas-producing provinces — Al-berta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia — sought to ease that

[Details of the agreement was disclosed in Parliament on Thursday by Oil Minister Patricia Carney, Reuters reported from Ottawa. She said oil prices would be deregulated as of June 1 and would be determined by market forces, and she announced the abolition of many federal taxes on the oil industry,

[The new policy effectively dismantled much of the National Energy Program introduced in 1980 by Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the prime minister at the time, in a bid to lessen foreign domination of the oil industry.
[Bernard Isantier, chairman of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said the new accord would reawaken investor confi-

"It meets every concern on matters of principle that Alberta feels strongly about," said John Zaozimy, energy minister of Al-berta, which produces 85 percent of Canada's oil and gas. Alberta has been particularly critical of the revenues tax.

Statistics indicate that the recovery was well under way before the accord. Last year, a record 9,149 wells were completed, up from 8,965 in 1980, the previous record year. And there has been a 27-percent improvement $91.4 million in the first two months of 1985, from $60 million in the like period a year ago. Seismic studies — an early phase of oil exploration — have also increased sharply.

"This is an industry that is poised for a significant recovery," said James Gray, executive vice president of Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd., which is planning to raise its drilling expenditures to $108 million this year from $72 million in 1984.

The only real obstacle, Mr. Gray and others in the industry said, would have been a failure to reach a new energy accord.

"Not to deliver would be a serious thing." C. William Dan-iel, president of Shell Canada Ltd., warned. Now, the industry is expected to spend vigorously. In a recent survey by Nickel's Daily Oil Bul-letin, a Canadian trade publica-

As a result, Argentina was to fall into arrears Sunday on overdue in-terest payments of about $1 billion, the sources said.

The Argentine treasury said that under the government's revenueraising program, tax receipts should increase by about 25 percent through increases in income, profits and stamp taxes, the reim-position of an inheritance tax and the waiving of bank-secrecy laws for tax inspectors.

U.S. House Unit to Audit 7 Pentagon Contractors

By Wayne Biddle New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The U.S. House Armed Services Committee said that it would audit seven weapons producers as part of an nvestigation of contract work for the Department of Defense.

The committee said on Friday that the companies were chosen only because they represent a cross-section of the industry. They are General Dynamics Corp.; Sper-ry Corp.; Newport News Ship-building & Dry Dock Co., a subsidiary of Tenneco Inc.; Bell Helicopter Textron Inc., a subsid-iary of Textron Inc.; McDonnell Douglas Corp.; Rockwell Interna-tional Corp., and Boeing Co.

For the auditing project, which is expected to take about 45 days, 14 auditors from the Pentagon's Defense Contract Audit Agency and the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, have been assigned to the committee. Their focus will be overhead costs billed to the government, a subject of intense interest since evidence arose last year of improper billings for entertainment and personal travel by General Dynamics execu-

Last Monday, General Dynam ics said that it would voluntarily withdraw $23 million out of $63.6 million in overhead charges questioned by Pentagon auditors for 1979 to 1982. The company billed the government for $170 million in such expenses during that time.

Meantime, an air force spokes-man confirmed Friday that the ser-vice intended to notify General Electric Co. that its suspension Thursday from bidding on new Pentagon contracts would extend throughout the Executive Branch of the government, including the General Services Administration, which manages government pro-curement activities.

Larry Vaber, a spokesman for GE, said backlogs in major projects would cushion the overall effect. He added that, in aircraft engines alone, GE had a $6.9-billion backlog at the end of 1984 that would carry the company through the next five years.

The backlog was up from $5.5 billion the year before, he said. In the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1983, GE held more than $4.5 billion worth of contracts from the Defense Department, employing 65,000 of the company's 330,000 mployees. It is the fourth-ranking Pentagon contractor.

Pentagon officials were unable on Friday to name specific projects that might be affected by the sus-Thursday by Air Force Secretary Verne Orr. But an air force officer familiar with the company's work suggested that GE would feel some pressure if the suspension contin-ued toward bidding this fall on an advanced lighter-engine program.

Pace of New Business Accelerates In Eurocommercial-Paper Market

By Carl Gewirtz

PARIS - The pace of new business in the emerging Eurocommercial-paper market is quickening and will gather speed, bankers predict, as more and more companies rush to lock in the very favorable terms currently available.

The latest to tap the market include Travelers Corp., Citicorp Capital Market Australia, the state of Victoria in Australia, Communications Satellite Corp., Reed International PLC, Investors in Industry, Southwest Airlines Inc. and Bangkok Bank Ltd. Behind all this activity was the fear that borrowing costs could rise if banking regulators ever get around to establishing guidelines on the amount of off-balance sheet business commercial banks underwrite or, in the absence of official guidance, if banks themselves decide to limit the growth of such

There is no sign that either dan-ger is imminent, although most market participants believe that estimated $30 billion of such facilities have already been booked by panks, although only a small part - believed not to exceed $6 billion has been activated. But some bankers assert that putting together syndicates to underwrite the placement of shortterm Euronotes is getting harder as the numbers mount.

There is no overt confirmation of this. To the contrary, the group facility for Imperial Chemical In-dustries PLC reads like a Who's Who of international banking the leading French, Dutch, West German, Japanese and Swiss banks - despite the very low fees, ranging from .04 to .1 percent, and averaging 1/16 percent for the 10-year life of the facility.

The eye-catcher in the underwriting list is the sparse participation of U.S. banks - only Citicorp (which put it together), Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and Chase Manhattan Bank — and the appearance of only one British bank, Midland Bank Ltd.

Worth noting is the absence of Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York from this market. As the retaining a triple-A rating, Morgan's withdrawal must say some-thing about the unsound rewardto-risk ratio for banks backing note facilities. In fact, critics argue that deals are being arranged at ridicu-lously thin costs as banks compete to win "market share" and establish a leading position.

The banks will earn an annual facility fee of 12.5 basis points. (There are 100 basis points in 1 percent.) However, Travelers can put as much as it wants "on reserve," for which it will pay a com-mitment fee of only 6.25 basis points. Amounts on reserve can be upgraded to available with three months' notice or immediately through payment of what managers call a "redesignation" fee of 10 ba-

Comsat's $150-million facility runs for seven years. It will pay an annual facility fee of 12.5 basis points, which can be reduced to 10 basis points on amounts that it designates as "on reserve," However, Comsat is obliged to always keep at least 25 percent of the facility on an available basis. Moving from reserve to available can be done at no cost with 90 days' notice or immediately with payment of a fee of 12.5 basis points. The Comsat notes will bear a maximum margin of 1/2-point over Libor. If underwriters have to provide the money, they will earn an additional sliding fee depending on the size of the drawing: 1/8-point on

Southwest Airlines, whose U.S. debt is rated single-A, is seeking $50 million for five years. It will pay an annual facility fee of 10 basis points as well as a commitment fee of 15 basis points on undrawn "available" amounts and 10 basis on "reserve" levels. There will be no tender panel bidding for Southwest's paper, but underwriters will simply be asked to provide short-term "advances." The maximum yield on the paper is set at 25 basis points over Libor for the first two years and 35 points over Libor for the final three years. In effect, this is a mini-max deal, with underwriters assured that they can get paper up to their pro-rata mum bid of 15 basis points over 10 basis points over Libor. Underwriters will have access to only part of these notes - an amount that Merrill Lynch & Co., which is arranging the deal, would not specifiy. Merrill and S.G. War-burg & Co. will jointly place the notes not taken by underwriters.

Reed International, under the aegis of Warburg, is tapping the market for $50 million. The 10-year facility will also allow the company to issue notes denominated in Last Suspect, at 50-1, Wins Grand National LIVERPOOL (AP) — Last Suspect, a 50-to-1 longshot whose trainer and owner had not wanted him to run, rallied under jockey Hywell Davies in the final furlong Saturday to win the 1985 Grand National steeplechase at Aintree.

Mr. Snugfit, sent off at 12-to-1, led over the final few fences but ran out of steam and finished second; Corbiere, at 9-to-1 and the 1983 winner, was third and Greasepaint, a co-favorite at 13-2, fourth.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Last Suspect, in fourth place as the lead pack jumped the last of the 30 fences, put on a tremendous sprint in the final furlong to catch Mr. Snugfit just before the finish. The victory was worth $87,000 to his owner, the Duchess of Westminster. "The horse is a bit of an old character and the others started making the pace too fast for me," said Davies. "I just dropped my hands and let him hunt 'round the course. Then they began to drop like flies all around me."

Proud Truth Victor in Disputed Flamingo HIALEAH, Florida (UPI) - Chief's Crown finished first by a length in the $265,000 Flamingo Stakes on Saturday but was disqualified for cutting off Proud Truth and the latter was declared the winner.

Although there was no contact between the two thoroughbreds, Hialeah Park stewards ruled that Chief's Crown moved over into Proud Truth's path, preventing him from taking the lead. Stephan's Odyssey was third in the field of eight. It was Proud Truth's fourth straight victory; Chief's Crown had won four straight.

Weibring, Peete, Irwin Tied for Golf Lead PONTE VEDRA, Florida (AP) - D.A. Weibring bogeyed the last two holes in Saturday's third round of the Tournament Players Championship and dropped into a three-way tie for the lead with Calvin Peete and Hale Irwin.

Weibring shot par-72 for his total of 208. Peete, whose reputation as golf's most accurate player was tarnished slightly by a shot into the pond on the 17th, and Irwin, twice a U.S. Open champion, each played the third round in 69.

Next, at 210, were Gary Hallberg, who closed with a 67, and Dan Halldorson, who shot a 72. Bernhard Langer of West Germany hit two balls into the water on 18 and took a triple bogey-6 that put him at 75/211. Weibring had shot 68 Friday for a two-stroke lead after two rounds. Seve Ballesteros of Spain, the British Open title-holder and a recent winner in New Orleans, failed to qualify for the final two rounds, shooting a 74 for a 150 total.

Gambler and 6th Tulane Student Arrested

NEW ORLEANS (NYT) - A convicted gambler and a sixth Tulane University student were arrested Friday as the investigation into alleged point shaving by the school's basketball players spread off campus for the first time.

Roland Ruiz, 48, of New Orleans, was booked on five counts of sports bribery and one count of conspiracy to commit sports bribery. Between 1974 and 1979, he pleaded guilty or was found guilty of gambling in three cases in New Orleans and its suburbs. He also was convicted of dealing in counterfeit money and was in federal prison in Fort Worth, Texas, from November 1981 to February 1983.

The student, David J. Rothenberg, 21, a senior from Wilton, Connecticut, was booked on one count of conspiracy to commit bribery of sports participants.

He may show it to other potential donors, and when he has raised the money he needs - he does, of course - he is to return it to her. The royal family does not stay rich by thoughtless munificence.

And so, in a lavish burst of pain and wit, Stanley Elkin begins his latest novel, "The Magic Kingdom." It is the story of a weird and touching pilgrimage: seven dreadfully afflicted children and five adults with inner afflictions of their own, spending a week at the contemporary equivalent of a shrine, "a Lourdes in

By Stanley Elkin, 300 pp. $15.95. Dutton, 2 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

Reviewed by Richard Eder

T HE West has devoted itself to vanquishing or distracting so many kinds of Fate -

To kick off the campaign, he has an audience with the queen. She receives him in the family for endless tiny shopping sprees; and Tony, dying from leukemia. Lydia wears a wedding ring so people will think she is a pregnant child-delinquent in-appearance and querulousness of a 70-year-old invalid. Rena, dying from cystic librosis, is a swamp of rheumy discharges that she staunches with an enormous bagful of hand-

Their days at Disney World are irony what do we have to offer the doomed? -Elkin's gallows wit makes full use of it. But it is no cheap shot he is after. The central, endlessly painful and endlessly astonishing strength of his book is its depiction of seven spirits whose afflictions are not simply deformities but horizons as well. They are infinitely variable, unpredictable and alive. One has hysterics on one of the rides and has to be rescued. One sneaks into a chaperone's room to spy on her undressing. Others go off on their own to do some gingerly sightseeing. Disney World distracts them for a while, but, soon, everything else pales beside their obses-sion with discovering a hotel room that one of the adults has secretly rented for privacy. That is precisely what each of the children long for: a place to be themselves and not treaks.

The theme of individuality flowers gradually. Colin, the homosexual male nurse, arranges for them to sunbathe for an hour on a small island in one of the lagoons. Boys on one side, girls on the other; too far for their nudity to reveal deformity, close enough for it to reveal a brief sunny intimation of sex.

Colin, with his own quirks, is their good shepherd. He takes them to a Disney World parade, but early, so that what they focus on is not the parade but the spectators.

It is a climactic passage. There are the mid-dle-aged tourists with their sagging stomachs, dyed hair, wattles, wrinkles and wens. The language is typical of Elkin's verbal exuberance and larger-than-life speech.

Colin's purpose becomes clear. "She's had a bad day," Janet says of the fat woman, "Coo! Who ain 't?" Rena says, crying, "Which of us, hey? Which of them?" Earlier, one of them had said: "We are the children who die," but now Colin amends this:

"I tell you, that's you in a few years, never mind those three-score-and-ten you thought was your birthright. All that soured flesh, all those bitched and bollixed bodies. You see. You see what you thought you were missing?"

Elkin possesses a compassion that thunders. He is an extremist, a writer without silences, a pyramider. His depiction of the children's afflictions is so graphic and carried to such an imaginative length that, frequently, it is on the edges of the unbearable.

Sometimes, it crosses the edges. His style can be laborious. Trying to present inner emotion-al processes, it writhes and turns upon itself, relying upon italicized words that aim to convey a special intensity of feeling but eventually convey numbress.

But in its wit, its ferocity and its imaginative sympathy, "The Magic Kingdom" is another remarkable work of a remarkable writer. It is too loud at times, but we carry the noise away, as a camel carries off surplus water, and in the succeeding days, the noise becomes a troubling pillow for the rest of my life.

A Book With Facts for Baseball's Figurers

Not a lot has been accomplished for the past week, because this 407-page tome of small print has been leaping upon me at odd moments, pinning my shoulders to the floor and forcing me to snicker with delight when I learn that, since 1979, Jim Rice of the Boston Red Sox has batted 211 with men on base in late-inning pressure situations.

revealing, if you love fact as a starting point for poetic flight and psychological inquiry, then you may look at the $12.95 price tag and say, "I'd want it even if they moved the decimal point." Consider some of its more esoteric statistics:

Cal Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles hit 398 when the pressure was on in late innings last year. When men were on base in those situa-tions, his average jumped to .441. Ripken also define the big players.

His teammate, Eddie Murray, had a .838

slugging percentage with runners on base in the pletely unexplored because, until the last delate innings of close games. Over his career, cade, the computer technology required to do Murray has hit 323 under late-inning pressure; the job cheaply and simply did not exist. Now that is, from the seventh inning on with his team the "Analyst" can tell us everything worth tied or behind by three or fewer runs. Compare knowing about how players, and teams, perform that to his overall average of 298. Murray's in different situations. And it can tell a great home run rate increases by nearly 50 percent in deal, though not everything, about circum-

Fred Lynn, the Orioles' expensive acquisition on last winter's free-agent market, hit .225 and .191 in such vital circumstances. Over the last four years, Lynn has hit .204 with two outs and men in scoring position.

His slugging percentage was .602 in Fenway Park with the Red Sox; it was .471 in Anaheim, California, when he was with the Angels and is ,375 in Memorial Stadium against the Orioles. In the 1980s, Lynn has not been able to hit lefthanded pitchers, hit in the clutch or hit in Memorial Stadium. Why worry? He only has a $6.8-million, five-year contract.

Oriole right-hander Dennis Martinez is one of baseball's freak "reverse pitchers." He is the master of left-handed batters but right-handers hit him as if he were lobbing the ball up to the

The Orioles should have a team eye examination. In the last three years, Wayne Gross has hit .301, 298 and .306 in daylight and .225, .192 and .175 at night. In 1984 Lowenstein batted .291 during the day versus .203 at night.

All this, and much more, comes from just a cursory evaluation of one team. Baltimore's Storm Davis can't pitch with men on base and has little stamina. Mike Flanagan is the oppo-site, for his career having held opponents to a 214 average in late-inning pressure situations with men on base. Trppy Martinez can not pitch with the bases empty, allowing a 518 stugging percentage versus 295 with men on; maybe he should always pitch from the stretch.

Baseball is a game of situations and circumstances. Situation: men on first and third, two outs, late innings, close game. Circumstances; left-handed hitter vs. right-handed pitcher, real game, a road game for the hitter.

Those dimensions have gone almost comstances.

Aurelio Lopez The "Analyst" studies every player and pitcher in baseball in the following categories: Hitters vs. right- and left-handers; with runners on base or bases empty: under late-inning pressure; on grass and turf; home and road; day and night; with runners in scoring position, runners in scoring position and two outs, runners on third with less than two outs and leading off innings. In each of these basic areas, the breakdown includes batting average, slugging average, onbase percentage, home run-walk-and-strikeout percentages and the player's rank in his league in every statistic. Each hitter has 290 different entries, plus a 10-year career synopsis.

The poor pitchers only have 258 statistics each. Of course, the player that each man most loves and hates to face is here, too. Pete Rose's worst batting average during his career is .095, against Bob Owchinko.

The man to thank for this masterwork, which ranks beside the Macmillan Baseball Encyclopedia as both a reference work and a source of idle joy, is Seymour Siwoff.

He is the owner of the Elias Sports Bureau. which does the official statistics for the National League, the National Football League and the National Basketball Association. Siwoff is the king of statistics, and this is the crown atop his meticulous life's work

To me, this is the book I always dreamed existed, so I created it," he said. "What amazed me was it was the fans, not the teams, that seemed most interested in it. When we decided to publish this book, do you know many major league teams had signed up to buy it for 1984?

Not one." If the public doesn't take the "Analyst" to its heart in a hurry, it may not live long in the bottom-line world of publishing. If that doesn't sway you, then think of it this way. The next time you see a manager send up a left-handed pinch-hitter against Dennis Martinez with the game on the line, you'll know exactly what to LEXINGTON, Kentucky -Georgetown came a step closer Saturday evening to proving what many have said all along: The Hoyas are easily the best college basketball team in the United States.

They overcame a ragged first half and routed St. John's, 77-59, to earn a berth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship game for the second consec-

Georgetown, the defending national champion and the No. Iranked team in the news-agency polls with a 35-2 record, will face Villanova (24-10) Monday night in a final pairing of Big East Conference teams.

Villanova, which finished fourth in the conference during the regular season, upset Memphis State, 52-45, in Saturday's opening semifinal game at Rupp Arena. Georgetown beat Villanova twice during the regular season, by scores of 52-50

The Hoyas will be playing in the title game for the third time in four seasons. Last year they beat Houston, 84-75, and in 1982 lost to North Carolina, 63-62. That was the freshman season for Patrick Ewing, Georgetown's dominating 7-foot (2.13-meter) center. St. John's was trying to make it to the championship game for the first time since 1952, when its only appearance ended in an 80-63 loss to Kansas. The Redmen finished the season at 31-4, a record number of victories for a St. John's team. One of them came against Georgetown, but so did three losses with Saturday's by the widest mar-said Georgetown's coach, John Thompson. "He presents more problems than any player I've had to coach against. Very few players know how to get open like he does. We concede his shots. We worry about his passing."

By Sid Moody A BOARD THE SAGA SIG-LAR — Quite possibly: The first European to see North America was Biarni Herjulfsson. The first European to land on it was Leif Ericsson. The first European born there was Snorri Thorfinsson. Christopher Columbus, who neither landed on nor even saw

North America proper, showed up

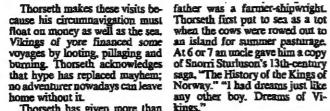

500 years after all these Vikings. Of course, Viking history as told in the sagas can be more than a little vague. So the United States does not celebrate Bjarni Herjulfsson Day. But there can be little debate that the first Viking ship to discover Lewiston, Florida, not to mention Fort Myers or the Caloosahatchee River, was called the Saga Siglar, Ragnar Thorseth commanding. There are photos to prove it.

Thorseth is a saga in his own right. He is the first Norwegian to reach the North Pole overland. He went through the Northwest Pas-sage atop Canada in a 20-foot (6meter) outboard pleasure boat. As a lad, he rowed across the North Sea: Prince Philip, who by chance was on hand when Thorseth ar-rived in the Shetlands in his rowboat, said: "You're crazy, man." Now Thorseth is sailing Saga Sig-lar, a replica of a Viking trading ship, around the world.

Why does Thorseth, who has a small farm in Norway, do such things instead of milking goats? Because he wants to, he says, But that does not explain the man. The crew says Thorseth has a horned Viking helmet; just as John F. Kennedy avoided wearing funny hats lest he become a caricature à la Calvin Coolidge in an Indian headdress, Thorseth won't be caught dead in the helmet.

But see him at the carved handle of Saga Siglar's steering oar: the eyes blue and steady; the beard, with a slight reddish tinge. One son is Eirik, 11, the name of Leif Ericsson's father, the other, Njal, 9, named for a saga hero. And Ragnar was the name of the first Viking to plunder Paris.

Down deep, this chain-smoking Ragnar Thorseth is a reborn Viking, a roamer, a darer, a throw-back in a fisherman's sweater to a high-seas people who gave their name to an age.

Thorseth has given more than 60 television interviews in the United States, answering a dismayingly identical litany of ques-tions. How does he feel? Fine. How big have the waves been? Thirty feet. What kind of boat is this? Etc. Etc.

This epic will cost about $1 million. The crew sells Saga Siglar Tshirts ($9), Norwegian knives ($25) and posters ($5) every time they reach land. In Houston they sold $11,000 worth of T-shirts in Many Norwegian companies have chipped in, including a beer company that stashed strategic supplies of "product" along the way. A German cigarette company is coming out with a tobacco product next year called "Adven-ture," featuring the Saga Siglar predominantly in its advertising. Thorseth's other concessions to the 20th century - and sometimes the 19th — are two prefab boxes amidships. One holds the galley, head, electronic navigational devices and several replicas of Viking battle axes that he shows to school children. Vikings went for the legs, he tells bug-eyed children. A foe who can't run is

The other box is for Thorseth, his wife, Kari, the two boys and the crew - up to five or six at any - to sleep in. It was patterned after the cans Norweians pack sardines in. Each crewman's brink has headroom of about a cubit, the distance from the elbow to the first knuckle. A skraelling the Viking term for a native North American, is a temporary inhabitant of a top bunk.

The skraelling takes his first turn at the steering oar as the Saga Siglar, rather faster than but as steady as an iceberg, sails out of St. Petersburg into the Gulf of Mexico. The wind is chilling. Thorseth's trip to the North Pole, which he reached in 1982, tested his leadership as well as his mettle. An expedition member whose determination was not as strong as Thorseth's had weakened the resolve of the Eskimo guide with whom he shared a tent. Mutiny threatened. Thorseth brought back the guide's courage by patiently arguing that his gods would not be pleased with any sign of cowardice. Thorseth took a year of journalism in college, then became a newspaperman. "By 1975 it was becoming boring. I planned a trip across the Atlantic via Greenland in a small fishing boat. I talked it over with Kari. She said. Do it. When I got to Greenland, made a deal with a museum: He would donate the replica if he could sail it around the world first. Once people could see the boat, and see that Thorseth was serious, money began coming in. At Fort Myers, the Saga Siglar turns inland up the Caloosahatchee River toward Lake Okeecho-

bee. Thorseth's claim that his is the first Viking ship to discover Florida seems substantiated by the natives. They don't know what to make of the Saga Siglar. As the knarr, its single square sail bellied to the wind, makes its bitnated to the overuse of alcohol called them alcoholics. Not so much anymore. In a salutary reaction against the use of eu-phemism, the word now used without self-consciousness or fear of condemnation is the noun that is also the past participle of drink: "Not being a drunk is the only way I'm going to stay alive," Elizabeth Taylor told a reporter last month. "Drunk is a hard word, but I've had to be hard with myself to face it. A

After two months in a rehabilitation center, Taylor felt the need to use the blunt word to demonstrate an awakener to be valued rather than an insult to be avoided.

"We use alcoholics in our group's name," says a spokesman for Alcoholics Anonymous, "but one of our co-founders very often would use drunks in meetings. He always re-ferred to himself as a drunk even though he had not gotten drunk for a long while."

Isn't drunk pejorative? "Certainly drunk is the stronger word, "says the spokesman, "though not quite as strong as hish or souse. Alcoholic has more of a clinical tone, more specific than drunk. We think of alcoholism as a disease, so far incurable. I haven't had a drink in 18 years, but I am still an alcoholic." The word drunk has not yet made it to New York State legal statutes; according to John O'Con-nor, a lawyer, lawmakers still pre-fer intoxicated or under the influence of alcohol, Black's Law Dictionary, 1968 edition, finds drunk and intaxicated to be synonymous, defining a person who is drunk partly as being "so far under the influence of liquor that his passions are visibly excited or his judgment impaired." A drunkard is defined as one "whose ebriety has become habit-ual," and Black's properly finds "habitual drunkard" redundant.

The new popularity of the harsh word — used almost as if a dysphemism was being sought - can be partly attributed to the effective

By William Safire campaign by MADD, Mothers WASHINGTON — The euphomore Against Drunk Drivers, Curiously, now that their use of the rest of the curiously, kind of prepunishment is being widely adopted in more formal speech, MADD has second thoughts. Anne Seymour, a MADD media contact, says: "In spite of drunk's being in our organization's name, we are moving away from using either drank or alcoholic in our vocabulary. The word we are using now is impaired. That's be-cause we are equally concerned with eliminating driving by some-one who may not be drunk, but is under the influence of other

There's no polite ing while hopped up or spaced out way of saving it." has not yet reached the point of dropping drunk from its name. The title is being changed slightly, but her willingness to face the consequences of compulsive drinking.

The shock in the word is treated as Driving. Apparently it wants to inveigh against the activity rather than the practitioners. pace Proj atan Old E Impaired probably will not get off the ground as a substitute for "influenced by drugs, including alcohol." Impaired may be used in law to describe drunk or hoppedup driving, but in the general language impaired is being used widely to modify or more accurately describe what used to be called blind or deaf. People who are not wholly blind or deaf are called sight-impaired or hearing-impaired, and if it helps them get jobs or feel better, anti-euphemists should not take offense. In other contexts, impaired is used as a euphemism for retarded, itself a euphemism now losing its gentle connotation. Because impaired is a kind vogue word, it is unlikely to be widely applied to an activity to be condemned.

I think that's good: Drunk is a word that has more jocular slang synonyms than almost any other, from blotto to pickled to pifflicated to three sheets to the wind, but is less than ever a laughing matter or one to be soothed by kind words. The emergence of drunk into formal discourse signifies the wide public recognition of a problem; I suggest Mothers Against Drunk and/or Drugged Driving (MADDD).
